METRO SERVICE BETTER, BUS REROUTING PLANNED

by Mike Jones

About a month ago a News Review article reported that, in spite of a rosy picture painted by the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority about its Metrorail Blue Line, the line was actually afflicted, if not plagued, by various pitfalls in the system. This reporter claimed that Metro should possibly have waited for about a month for testing, in order to iron out most of the bugs.

In that month, Metro has improved. Not dramatically, mind you; the one-time passenger might run into a minor or major problem that may leave lasting memories, and few regular commuters will soon forget the recent flooding which caused the four-day suspension of the northern Blue Line operations. However, generally, Metrorail is improving. It is now reasonable to expect to board the Blue Line train at the Farragut St. Station shortly after 5 p.m. and to reach the Stadium-Armory lot in time for the 5:35 express bus to Greenbelt, although this is still not guaranteed. The 5:20 express bus to Springhill Lake is still a bit iffy.

The rail line has now reached a point that this columnist would recommend it outside of rush hour (between 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.) At those times, the service is undoubtedly faster and better than the surface bus system. However, during rush hour, some sticking door problems may occur in crowded rail cars which could delay the commuter. The guess here is that anyone using the rail lines to commute to and from work is on the government flexitime program, has a very understanding supervisor, or is in imminent danger of becoming unemployed.

Equipment

Equipment, although still lacking, is slowly but surely being installed. More farecard machines are visible at many stations, and more entrance and exit gates appear to be operational. It also appeared that all escalators were functioning, although the entrance at Gallery Place (ironically, the closest station to the Metro operations building) still has concrete stairs. The L'Enfant station still has no entrance from L'Enfant Plaza, but both entrances to the Farragut West station are operational.

Overall, Metro is looking better, if only slightly. Hopefully, improvements will continue, and the use of the Blue Line to get to the downtown area will be less cumbersome to citizens in the future.

In other Metro matters, some citizens groups in the District of Columbia are considering legal action to force Metro to return to a 40 cent rush hour fare within the District of Columbia. Since this increase was also passed on to commuters, any action taken on the matter would have an effect on them also.

Bus Route Changes

Also, if Metro has its way, the route J-8 which operates between Beltway Plaza and Wheaton Plaza, will no longer serve Prince Georges Plaza, and will instead operate directly via University Boulevard for the entire distance between Greenbelt Road and Wheaton Plaza. Currently, the route operates via U.S. 1, Campus Drive, Prince Georges Plaza, and East-West Highway, duplicating the route traveled by the J-2 and J-4 route, which will not be affected by the proposed change.

GRENOBLE THEATRE GUILD BEGINS ITS FALL SEASON

The Grenoble Theatre Guild will open its fall season with the production of "Arsenic and Old Lace" by J. Kesselring. The play is scheduled to be presented in the St. Hugh's School gym during the first three weekends in November. Greenbelters in the cast include Marie Tournant, Jeff Beyrent, and George Jones.

Another change anticipated for the J-8 route is to combine it with the C-2 route operating between Wheaton Plaza and Montgomery Mall, and to call the entire route C-2.

If this proposal were to become effective, the end result would probably be: 1) reduction of service between Beltway Plaza and Prince Georges Plaza, 2) faster service to Wheaton Plaza, and points along University Boulevard, 3) faster service to Montgomery Mall, currently served by the J-2, which operates via Silver Spring, and 4) elimination of service by the main branch of the Prince Georges County Library, which would be two or three blocks from the J-2 and J-4 routes.

Those interested may register by phone (345-5800) or at the front information desk. Book discussions will take place the first Thursday of each month and the book to be discussed will be announced.

The Greenbelt Library has designated October as A Great Month for Contests for young adults, ages 13-18. Each week a different contest will be posted in the Young Adult area of the library. All winners each week will receive prizes; grand prizes will go to the first 4 contestants who are winners in each week's contest — that is, one must be a four time winner to qualify for the grand prize. The contest begins Oct. 3 at 3 p.m. and will continue daily, after 3 p.m. throughout the month (excluding Saturday and Sunday).

PILSKI REASSUMES MAYOR'S CHAIR AS COUNCIL LOOKS TO FUTURE

by Elaine Skolnik

The faces were the same but the seating arrangements changed as a veteran Greenbelt council, with a total of 32 years experience, took the oath of office on Monday, September 26 in the City Council chamber. By virtue of receiving high vote in the September 20 election, Richard Pilski was unanimously named mayor, regaining the seat he held from 1971-1975. He thus replaces Gil Weidenfeld, mayor during the past two years.

Norman Pritchett, clerk of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, administered the oath of office to Pilski. Weidenfeld, who finished 53 votes behind Pilski, was unanimously named mayor pro-tem. The invocation and benediction were offered by Monsignor William O'Donnell of St. Hugh's.

In his opening words to an audience consisting mostly of family and supporters of council members, Pilski said "The time has come for the voters of Greenbelt to elect the mayor in a direct election." He pointed to the "large number of votes cast for Robert Phillips . . . which would indicate that many people feel our election procedures should be reviewed." Pilski said that he would ask council to request the Election Board to do so.

Pilski set forth four priorities that he hoped council would undertake: (1) a passive recreation park on parcel 7, to be developed with the help of the University of Maryland and the Boxwood Citizens Association; (2) working with Greenbelt Homes Inc. to help solve the many problems they will be encountering in the years to come; (3) a ball field on the Springhill Lake Industrial site if an arrangement between SHL and the city can be accomplished and (4) an intra-city transportation system if feasible.

In a following speech Weidenfeld pledged to continue to be an active voice for Greenbelt in county and state municipal organizations. "Greenbelt is not an island unto itself," he said, "and needs to have influence with the county and state legislators to further the city's interests. Municipal organizations are the best vehicles to accomplish this goal."

Weidenfeld emphasized that the quality of life in Greenbelt is superior to that in any community in the Washington Metropolitan area. "We were environment and pollution conscious before these words became fashionable," he said. He pointed to the facilities and services provided by the city as the envy of the entire state. "Where else," he asked, "can one have all the fine facilities that are available in Greenbelt, and for them to be so convenient?"

Charles Schwan felt that the positions the previous council took with respect to the Golden Triangle, Springhill Lake North, improvement of the Kenilworth Avenue-Greenbelt Road intersection, interconnection among the several sections of the city and completion of Metro, were not the same as effectuating them. "Effectuation," he said, "depends on county, state and federal instrumentalities. We must increase as much as possible our efforts to persuade these entities to make the 'right' decisions."

Good Government

"Greenbelt," Schwan said, "has a tradition of good government. For that, much credit is owed to successive councils. Much more is owed to our having an excellent staff. Day in and day out, Jim Giese and company do their work quietly and well. They make us look good — sometimes in spite of ourselves."

Thomas White considered the problem of separation of the various sectors of Greenbelt by high speed highways as one that should receive high priority by council for reasons of safety, energy savings and better communication. He felt that pedestrian-bicycle overpasses between original and newer sections of Greenbelt were an "achievable goal."

White also felt council should pay close attention to "promoting equitable tax policies that provide fair treatment for residents of municipalities." He viewed the landfill site (Northway extended) as offering the best opportunity to "develop the needed facilities to give Braden Field a rest."

Richard Castaldi looked for more community participation and to unify the various parts of Greenbelt through improved communication. He spoke of council's efforts in revitalizing the Lake Park and limiting its usage by restrictive parking. "Residents residing near the park," he said, "should not be inconvenienced," and noted that the city would be monitoring the effect of the new ordinances.

"Taxes," Castaldi said are a concern to all Greenbelters and he pledged that he would make the effort to keep taxes down. He also was concerned that the number of ball fields in Greenbelt now is pretty much the same as when he was growing up, and applauded council's efforts to work with the Board of Education in obtaining the use of their facilities.

New Construction

All council members looked forward to the completion of the municipal building addition and the housing for the elderly, as well as additional ballfields, quality development on the Golden Triangle and Springhill Lake tracts, and a Metro station in Greenbelt. They would vigilantly oppose undesirable zoning and wanted to tie together the various sections of the city.

Council members expressed thanks to their workers and those who voted for them with the hope that all Greenbelters would take an active interest in city affairs — to let their opinions be known and support the council in opposing actions that would adversely affect the quality of life in Greenbelt. All felt that they had worked quite well in the past and would continue to do so in the future.

Pilski has served 12 years on council, Weidenfeld and Schwan six years and Castaldi and White four years.

Tidbits

According to Schwan's slide rule, the five successful candidates received 77.9 percent of the votes cast — more than 5 percent more than the 72.55 percent they received in 1975. Two years ago the unsuccessful candidates received 56.5 and 35.1 percent of the vote respectively. This year, the nonwinner received 54.4 percent.

In 1975 those who voted cast ballots for 4.21 candidates on the average, in 1977 for 3.98.

Greenbelt Diet Workshop

Thoughts on Retirement

To the Editor:

I would like to express my gratitude to our many friends who gave encouragement and support to my wife, Margaret, during my two recent stays in the hospital. Your kindness and consideration is indeed greatly appreciated.

On September 20, I tossed my lunch pail in the trash and put a coffee mug from the Landsat Operational Control Center on my memento shelf. This mug with the ERTS emblem on it will be a reminder of my days at the Goddard Space Flight Center.

There will be some things that I will miss upon retiring - but I certainly will not miss having to get up in the middle of the night after only a few hours of sleep so I could work the graveyard shift. Nor will I miss having to go to work on the swing shift and have to miss a favorite TV program.

Perhaps now, God willing, I will have a chance to complete the book on model yacht design that has remained unfinished for too long a time. . . . Perhaps I can get back into Scouting and other boy's work that I have done in the past. . . . One thing for certain is that I am going to complete refurbishing my 10 Rater and sail it on Greenbelt Lake. . . .

In a few weeks hence, if you should happen to see a portly, slightly bald old coot down at the lake sailing a model yacht with blue sails on it, that will be me enjoying my retirement. And, if you would like to get into the fascinating sport of model yachting, I would be more than glad to give you the benefit of my experience in the sport. . . .

THANKS

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the people who voted for me in last week's council election for their wonderful support. For a newcomer, such as myself, to receive such a high tally, indicates that indeed it is time for a change.

I would especially like to thank those non-Greenbelters who helped me at the polls: Richard Rose who used annual leave to help me at Springhill Lake, Debbie Lowther for spending her day off in Springhill Lake, Tina Garbern for using her study time for me, and my two sisters Gwendy and Gayle. A special thanks to Irene Hensel for the coffee she gave and for her help at the Center poll.

To everyone who helped in this effort I am grateful and hope that the future will be as rewarding as the very recent past.

Bob Phillips

THANKS

To the Editor:

I wish to thank those who worked for my reelection to city council. Much, much more than most candidates is the debt I owe them. To them and to all who voted for me, I promise that I shall do everything possible to justify the confidence shown in me.

Charles F. Schwan

THANKS

To the Editor:

My most sincere thanks to all my friends and neighbors who voted for me in the city election. I shall endeavor to do my very best in my duties as councilman for the City of Greenbelt.

A special thanks to those who worked at the polls to further my candidacy - I am most grateful.

Richard J. Castaldi

THANKS

To the Editor:

A sincere thanks to the many Greenbelters who supported my reelection to the city council.

A special note of appreciation to my many friends who actively participated in my campaign.

As I knocked on the doors of Greenbelt voters during the campaign, I met many friendly and nice people whom I look forward to serving over the next two years.

Gil Weidenfeld

CITY NOTES

One-and-one-half inches of asphalt was applied over a badly deteriorated section of sidewalk in front of No. 1 Plateau Place. Approximately 200 linear feet of walk were cleaned and a tac coat applied before the asphalt was applied.

Thirty-five hundred square yards of sod were applied on the North End school ballfield. City trucks and trailer hauled the sod from upper Montgomery County. Some work has been done on the golf course. The area around the Youth Center was cleaned.

Construction is to begin next week on the Stidham Building, the future home of the Nationwide Insurance Company. The general contractor is the John Louis Co. of Baltimore. The city hopes to use the surplus dirt that will accumulate from the removal of a hill, at the city's old landfill.

Greenbelt CARES

Four parent meetings were held recently to accommodate all the parents involved in the tutoring program. The basic design of the meetings is to enable parents to discuss concerns they are having with their child academically. In addition, parents are given group exercises and individual homework assignments to aid them in helping their child.

The initial Big Sib training began on September 24. Five volunteers underwent an orientation program and each was assigned to a young person.

Person To Person Program

The Prince Georges County Red Cross is offering a training session for volunteers interested in its "Person-to-Person Program" who provide patients in nursing homes with essential personal contact by visiting with them weekly.

Anyone who is interested in the program is encouraged to participate in the training session on Sat., Nov. 2, at 1 p.m. in the Prince Georges Red Cross Chapter, 6206 Belcrest Road, Hyattsville. For additional information call the Red Cross Office of Volunteers at 559-8500.

Money Management Seminar for Women

The Prince Georges County Commission for Women will sponsor a seminar on money management. Guest speaker Sally E. Law, Vice-President of American Financial Consultants, will discuss budgeting, credit, borrowing money, life insurance, social security, investments, and Federal income tax.

The seminar will be held on Wed., Oct. 5, at 7:30 p.m. at the Greenbelt library.

To reserve a seat, call the Commission for Women, 952-3383; in the evening, contact Virginia Gallagher, 439-0597. There is no charge.

Scout Troop 746

The final selection of the Pack 746 Physical Fitness Team of an 8, a 9, and a 10 year old boy to compete in the National Cub Scout Physical Fitness Competition was held at the Mowatt Memorial United Methodist Church and the three winners of the preliminary selection were still top scorers.

Donald Bratz 8, Robert MacCracken 9, and Jason Evans 10 made the highest scores in the five event competition: standing long jump, softball throw, push-ups, sit-ups and 50 yard dash. The boys will represent the pack in the Patuxent District Elimination on September 10.

Individual honors were taken by Jason in long jump, Christopher Murray in softball throw, push-ups by Donald, sit-ups by Jason and dash by Donald 8, Bobbie 9, and Terrence Zanin 10.

All boys who have passed second grade are invited to join Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts (now called Scouts), or Explorers at the School Night for Scouting on September 29 at Center School, North End School or St. Hughs. Flyers will be given out at school at the proper time.

Registered Cubs, Scouts or Explorers and their families are invited to the Maryland University-Duke football game on October 22 at Byrd Stadium at a special low-price ticket. Call leaders now for these tickets.

Questions can be answered by calling Hunt at 474-1450.

March For Soviet Jewry

The Mishkan Torah congregation, Ridge and Westway, invites the community to join them in their Simchat Torah celebration on Tues. Oct. 4 at 7:30 p.m. On this occasion the congregation expresses its solidarity with Soviet Jewry and marches through the streets of Greenbelt, dancing, singing and celebrating the completion and beginning of the Torah reading.

SOLAR ENERGY RESEARCH PROJECT SHOWS 47% SAVINGS IN 6 MOS.

The Greenbelt Homes, Inc./N.A.S.A. solar energy research project has demonstrated a fuel oil savings of 47 percent for its first six months of operation.

GHI and its nearby neighbor, the NASA/Goddard Space Flight Center jointly undertook the project in which a four-home structure was equipped with a solar energy system. Their goal was to demonstrate how such a system can augment a conventional hot water heating unit to conserve home heating fuel.

The research project began full-time operation this past February. It was turned over to GHI by Goddard in a special ceremony on Tuesday, September 27, at 10 a.m. Participants included Goddard Director, Dr. Robert S. Cooper, and GHI President, Dr. James W. Smith.

As a major NASA research Center, Goddard has developed an expertise in the design of thermal control systems for satellites which must maintain stable temperatures for successful operation in the vacuum of space.

"By putting this expertise to work, we were able to help show a community the way to conserve heating fuel," said Emil Hymowitz, Goddard's manager for the project.

Federal agencies such as NASA are under a mandate not only to conserve energy but to help demonstrate new ways for conserving energy.

Greenbelt is considered ideal for this project because it uses hot water heat and so many of its buildings are identical. These factors have simplified the development of the solar heating system which is designed to work in conjunction with the existing variable temperature hot water heating system.

No single home will benefit from any windfall savings due to the research project. Savings will be evenly distributed throughout the cooperative community since each member pays an equitable portion of the total heating bill for the community.

For this project, the flat-roofed research structure was insulated; instrumented for oil consumption, water usage, and temperature data; and equipped with solar energy collectors mounted at pitched angles on the roof.

Each collector consists of a glass-covered metal container which houses a network of small water pipes affixed to a metal heat absorber. All of the solar collectors are coupled to an insulated hot water storage tank beneath the building.

In operation, water is pumped to the roof where it is heated when flowing through the solar collectors.

From there, the heated water drains into the storage tank and is subsequently pumped into the building's existing hot water heating system when needed, day or night. Consequently, the structure's oil furnace requires fewer "burns" to heat the structure.

For comparison purposes, an insulated flat-roofed building without a solar collector but otherwise similar to the research structure was instrumented to collect oil consumption, water usage, and temperature data.

Greenbelt always has been energy conscious. Since 1974, the community has instituted several energy savings programs in its 40-year old heating plants. Costs to date have amounted to about $1 million, but the programs are expected to pay for themselves through oil savings by the end of 1979.

Eckankar Film

There will be an introductory lecture on Eckankar, the Path of Total Awareness, at the Greenbelt Youth Center, Sunday, Oct. 2, at 7:30 p.m. The film "Eckankar, A Way of Life" will be shown. The lecture is free and the public is cordially invited.

Eckankar, also known as the Ancient Science of Soul Travel, provides the opportunity for individuals to unfold their capability to experience life beyond the physical plane, and to learn about the true nature of man, and the universal life current.

Police Blotter

(The following represents two weeks of police news.)

Several electronic items were reported stolen from a classroom at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. The items were removed from a wall locker during the summer months. Lookouts have been issued for the missing items.

A truck owned by one of the officers and stolen from his residence in the city on August 29 was recovered by Virginia State Police on September 2. The vehicle was stripped and abandoned on I-95 near Richmond.

Murals Project Delights Greenbelt

by Linda Orenstein

If you haven't seen the northern wall of Co-op lately, saunter over and take a look. A pleasing community scene will greet your eyes, obviously only a portion of it completed, with scaffolding underneath. The representation began with purple and pinkish hues but other colors have now been added to the work. Greenbelt is benefiting from the Prince Georges County Murals Project begun in May of this year. The first mural completed is located in Riverdale at the junction of East-West Highway and Route 1, and was unveiled on Saturday, September 24 at 12 p.m. The Greenbelt mural will be the second in this endeavor to beautify Prince Georges County.

The Murals Project, sponsored by the Arts Division of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Department of Parks and Recreation of P.G. County, was instituted with several objectives in mind. It is designed to beautify the county while bringing aesthetics into the community and involving the citizenry in the artistic process. It gives artists of Prince Georges County an opportunity to display their talents and will create a bond between the residents of the community involved and the artists.

Chicago was the home of the first murals project in the United States. It was organized by a private arts council and the work was done in communities suffering deterioration. Other cities became interested in the idea and soon New York, Baltimore, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and others had their own murals programs.

How Greenbelt Was Chosen

A year ago the Arts Division of the Maryland Park and Planning Commission began seeking funds to begin a project in P.G. County. The Division serves community groups interested in the arts, as does an arts council, and aims to involve the community. The project ultimately was voted upon and accepted and that is how it came to the County. But how did it reach out and encompass Greenbelt? Florian Svitek, an artist, formerly a Greenbelt resident, suggested to the group that work be done on the Greenbelt Theater. Support was given to the project and meetings were arranged. Through a series of circumstances, however, the theater was no longer a possible candidate for a mural, but the Greenbelt Co-op welcomed the involvement in the arts program.

The project demonstrates Greenbelt's continuing support of public art as it did in 1937 with the commission of the stone "Mother and Child" in the Center Mall by Lenore Thomas.

A Sense of Community

The Greenbelt mural is a carefully thought-out endeavor. Five people were appointed by Mayor Weidenfeld to discuss the mural design with its artists. It was decided that the theme should reflect the character of Greenbelt, the sense of community, the family orientation, the interaction between the young and older citizens. The mural will extend over most of the wall and will be completed one section at a time. Approximately one month of painting remains.

The artists, Lori Yates and her assistants, Kevin Grisby and Bill Rolig, will be using a special acrylic paint called polytec. They will prime the wall, seal it, draw, underpaint with flat colors and then model the colors. The mural won't look like the finished product until it is, indeed, finished.

Margery Freeman of the Arts Division, stressed that all Greenbelters are welcome to view the mural and ask questions. "See you at the mural," may become a new Greenbelt expression.

Public Hearing on the Interchange For Kenilworth-Greenbelt Rd Held

by Virginia Beauchamp

The city of Greenbelt has taken no position on the relative merits of six alternate proposals for redesigning the Kenilworth Ave.-Greenbelt Rd. interchange, city manager Jim Giese told State Highway Administration engineers at a public hearing Thursday, Sept. 15 in the SHA District office on Kenilworth Ave. But city council members "do want you to begin construction tomorrow," he added jocularly.

That position expressed the view of many local residents that improvement of the intersection is urgently needed. At the same time, as the meeting made clear, the plans presented are currently scarcely more than sketches, with detailed engineering work still a distant project. One purpose of the hearing, in fact, was to present to SHA planners information on problems and issues that area residents might wish to have incorporated into the planning process. Which ever alternate is eventually selected, no change in the present intersection can be anticipated until after 1982, when funding for right of way and construction will be effected.

Besides Giese in representing Greenbelt, mayor Gil Weidenfeld, speaking in part as a former resident of Springhill Lake, asked that SHA planners particularly note the dangers in the present exit from Edmonston Rd. into the southbound lanes of Kenilworth. Drivers of vehicles planning to make a left or U-turn at the Greenbelt Rd. light, he noted, must maneuver across three lanes of traffic in a very short distance—"an almost suicidal" requirement. SHA District Engineer M. Slade Caltrider, presiding officer, assured those present that elimination of hazards in the Edmonston Rd. exit would certainly be included in the plans.

Another Greenbelt resident, Alfred Lowrey, who represented the Prince Georges Environmental Coalition, asked for a clear statement from the SHA as to whether a projected extension of Kenilworth Ave. north to connect with U.S. 1 was assumed in present predictions concerning traffic flow at the Greenbelt Rd. intersection. He said that he had been given conflicting views by SHA staff as to whether traffic flow figures were predicted on an extended or an unextended Kenilworth. He was assured that clarification would be forthcoming.

Lowrey also asked for particular attention to the impact on noise levels of the new interchange on the Lakeside Dr. area especially, which he claimed now receives noise reflected back from the ridge behind the Lakeside properties, that along which Ridge Rd. is constructed. He was assured by an SHA representative charged with responsibility for evaluating environmental impact of the new highway construction that sensitive noise sensors will be utilized at all locations to be affected by construction changes and that engineering specifications will be drawn to reduce noise levels as much as possible.

The only suggestion to SHA officials not from a Greenbelter was an inquiry from James Brady, transportation officer for the Prince Georges public school system, concerning ingress and egress for the Greenbelt Junior High School property and the school bus parking lot and maintenance facility. Engineering of access to these properties would be particularly difficult, he noted, in any of the models in which Greenbelt Rd. is depressed below Kenilworth Ave.

Choices Between Alternates

As described in an earlier article, four of the engineering alternates for the intersection depress Greenbelt Rd. below Kenilworth Ave., in some ways considered a better design because it utilizes the natural lay of the land. Alternatives showing Kenilworth depressed below Greenbelt Rd., Caltrider pointed out, offer a potential for collection of water at the bottom of the slope.

Though city officials have expressed no preference between these designs, they have noted in informal discussion of the plans that no traffic lights would be installed on the depressed road, while lights would be necessary to control left turns on the higher road in some of the alternatives. For this reason a depressed Greenbelt Rd. might be considered more convenient for many city residents.

No families will have to be relocated because of the projected changes in the intersection. Small strips of land, however, would be needed from Greenbelt Park in several of the alternatives and a substantial corner from the Golden Triangle in alternative 6. Little adverse environmental effect is expected and air quality, in fact, would probably be slightly improved because of smoother traffic flow.

But that traffic flow would eventually slow down again. According to engineering estimates, by the year 2000 the best that can be expected of any of the alternatives is Level of Service D, defined as "traffic flow approaching instability. Delays to vehicles can be substantial, but no excessive back-ups should occur at the signals." Only Alternates 3, 4 and 6 would reach only to this level, considered the lowest acceptable level of service. The others project even more congested traffic flow by the year 2000.

Also officially representing Greenbelt at the hearing was councilman Charles Schwan. State delegates Pauline Menes and Leo Green were present, as well as a representative for delegate Kay Bienen.

MORAZ CAPTAINS MONUMENTS TEAM

by Linda Orenstein

The American Professional Slo-Pitch Softball League has a team called the Baltimore Monuments which has a captain named George Moraz. Moraz, of Lakeview Circle, a physical education instructor at Charles Carroll Junior High School in New Carrollton, has played amateur slo-pitch softball for years. Moraz feels that a great deal of his experience now utilized in professional play was derived from playing with the Greenbelt Shell Team formed after he graduated from high school. New players were constantly being added as others dropped out, but at some time many Greenbelters such as Tommy Delaney, Mark Gerring, Al Moraz, Chuck Figlia, Walsh Barcus, James Caruso, A.J. Nuzzo and others, were participants on the Shell team. The group went to the Nationals three times, twice in Jacksonville, Florida and once in Parma, Ohio.

After graduating from High Point High School, Moraz played four years of baseball at Frostburg. When the customary five-year waiting period drew to a close, Moraz was inducted into Frostburg's Hall of Fame. At school he also played three seasons of basketball and played tennis in his senior year. All of these activities did not dim his enthusiasm for playing slo-pitch softball with the Shell team, which he did when not attending school.

The Greenbelt Shell team became Addie's and George Moraz played with this team for one more year. For those not familiar with softball leagues, they function in the following manner: Fifteen players form a team and find a sponsor. Ten teams form a league and the leagues are headed by commissioners. The sponsor pays the fee for the team's entry into the league. All teams have playoffs or tournaments and whichever team wins goes to the Nationals, where one team represents each state.

Addie's team evolved into the Baltimore Monuments with George Moraz the only player remaining from the original Greenbelt Shell team. He is the captain and short-stop and Ray Duncan the manager. It took time for the team to mesh and take shape, but after one year of professional play it is getting on its feet. The name Monuments? Accept it or not, the fable is that the team was named for the monumental attractions of Baltimore.

Moraz says that slo-pitch softball has caught on recently both in the recreational and competitive senses because of its fast paced action in regard to runs scored and fielding. Professional ball, unlike the amateur version, has a pitcher's mound placed farther back, bases sixty-five feet apart rather than sixty-foot distances, and a fence at three hundred feet or more instead of at two hundred and seventy-five feet. George Moraz, comparing engaging in professional versus amateur competition, feels that professional players are tougher, because of broader experience, and can play most positions. He enjoys the more competitive atmosphere and the opportunity to travel and play different teams in various parts of the country. Moraz relishes the greater dedication required by professional slo-pitch softball.

Will he play next year with the Monuments? According to Moraz the game is played on a year-to-year basis with changing teams. He hopes to see slo-pitch softball's popularity grow, and that Greenbelt youngsters will carry on the tradition of the Greenbelt teams.

GHI Board Sets Policy On Wiring, Fire Costs, Pets

by Roberta McNamara

A policy for electrical heavy-up was finally established at the Greenbelt Homes, Inc. board meeting of September 22. The board also developed a policy for recovering losses caused by negligence of members. In addition, the board determined a new tactic for better control of pets belonging to members.

Resolving a long-standing issue, the board decided that members wishing to sell their units must pay the total cost of electrical heavy-up when the Resale Inspector indicates that the units are in violation of Prince Georges County Code. In the past, when members were notified that deficiencies of any kind existed for which members were responsible, the members readily took care of these problems. (According to the Mutual Owners Contract, GHI is responsible only for the basic unit.) However, when GHI insisted that members correct violations of the electrical code, ranging in scope from double taps to the installation of illegal 220 V lines which allow for dryers, washers, and air conditioners, the selling members balked, saying that these conditions existed prior to their own purchase and that they thus were not responsible.

In the past few months management, at the direction of the board, has helped 24 out of 29 selling members with the costs of electrical heavy-up to bring these units up to county code. Now that the board has studied the problem, the consensus is that in order to be fair in a cooperative, the members should not have to pay for benefits that are not equally shared.

Fire Insurance

The cost of fire insurance for GHI has gone up to $63,000 per year from the previous $23,000. As an attempt to keep premium costs down, management changed the deductible from $250 to $1000. In case of a fire GHI needs to cut its expenses. Thus at management's request the board moved that when a fire loss occurs, and the court determines that negligence on the part of a member is involved, the amount of expense incurred by GHI as the result of the fire is to be charged to that member. This motion was extended to include any damages incurred by GHI as a result of member negligence.

Dogs and Cats

GHI management has received many complaints from members about dogs and cats running loose, defecation in yards, barking, the number of animals in a unit. In order to alleviate these problems, the board adopted the following intermediate procedures:

1. GHI's attorney will send a letter indicating the severity of the problem and the subsequent procedures to be used if the member does not control the animal.
2. Upon continued complaint, GHI's attorney will seek a court injunction to implement animal control.

This procedure is currently used in Reston and is extremely successful.

Other Matters

Manager Royal Breashears announced the retirement of Mary Dixon from the Sales Office. He also announced the appointment of long-time Greenbelt resident William Morin to assist Comptroller Don McGinn.
